squarespace enterprise	70	-	$23.96	Low

Enterprise Keyword Opportunity

Enterprise-specific terms like "wix enterprise" and "enterprise website platform" have low competition but high intent. These long-tail terms convert better than branded searches. Consider defensive bidding on competitor comparison terms ("webflow vs wix") where Wix can control the narrative.

Competitive Landscape Context

Direct Competitors

- Webflow — Design-forward, developer appeal, strong enterprise push
- Squarespace — SMB focus, less enterprise penetration
- WordPress VIP — True enterprise, complex implementations
- Adobe Experience Manager — Enterprise incumbent, high TCO

Enterprise Buying Signals

- "Website consolidation" — Multi-site enterprises
- "Agency partnership" — Scaling through partners
- "Brand consistency" — Multi-region deployments
- "Security compliance" — Enterprise IT requirements

The Enterprise Measurement Challenge

Enterprise deals have 6-18 month sales cycles. Standard last-click attribution fails. You need: (1) Incrementality testing with geographic holdouts, (2) Marketing Mix Modeling for long-term view, (3) First-party data connections between ad exposure and pipeline. The data exists in CRM and ad platforms — it just needs proper stitching.

What Works for Enterprise

- Account-based display — Target specific companies, not job titles alone
- Content syndication — Gated assets to named accounts
- LinkedIn InMail — Direct executive outreach at scale
- Retargeting — High-value visitors only (pricing pages, demos)
- Paid search (brand) — Capture existing demand, not create it

Budget Allocation (Example $50K/mo)

Channel	%	$/mo
LinkedIn (ABM + InMail)	45%	$22,500
Google (Brand + High Intent)	25%	$12,500
Content Syndication	20%	$10,000
Display Retargeting	10%	$5,000
